

2014 Application Process

Overview

First Year

Second Year

Third Year

Waldorf teachers must bring their own creativity and sense of self to bear – the “teacher as artist.” Therefore, the teacher works creatively with the growing child. With a sensibility trained through the arts, the teacher can ably perceive the developing, evolving child. This training relies on the study of anthroposophy and active participation in the arts to guide the self-transformation of the adult student towards the inner freedom necessary to truly meet the child. The teacher who strives toward an objective relationship between his or her self and the world brings ore objectivity to the student relationship, thereby supporting the child’s unique potential.
