

FolkSoul Farm

Positions Available for the 2022-23 School Year

FolkSoul Farm is a community-supported farm and Anthroposophically founded education center located on a beautiful 6 acre farm in Ashland, Oregon. Our mission is to bring education to the whole child in an innovative way that feeds the will, nurtures the heart and awakens a life-long love of learning.

Our ideal candidates will be able to teach a blended learning model of Waldorf education combined with daily outdoor experiences in a sustainable farm setting. All teachers must be able to flow in and out of indoor and outdoor spaces, be open to innovative curriculum and pedagogy, embrace a growth mindset, be receptive to feedback, and enjoy working collaboratively with other faculty and administrators to create an education environment that is aligned with the school's mission and program goals.

We are looking for teachers who bring joy and gratitude to their work and are excited to engage in robust outdoor activities with the children. Candidates should be friendly, open, well-spoken and grounded in Anthroposophy. A Waldorf teaching certificate or current enrollment in a Waldorf teacher training program is preferred, along with proficiency in the foreign language to be taught if seeking that teaching position.

FolkSoul Farm strives to serve as a model for social and ecological renewal and educational excellence, seeking to act in increasingly creative, collaborative and intentional ways while integrating a diverse community of children, families, and mentors. We are an independent 501c3 nonprofit, homeschool cooperative functioning as an outdoor Waldorf farm school. While health and safety are our top priority, we hold freedom, and what best serves the students and community as a whole in high regard.
